HOW TO DO WELL IN THIS COURSE AND WITH ONLINE-LEARNING

- Keep your work up to date.
- Participate as much as you can, even though it's an online course. Despite the absence of face-to-face interaction, you are still part of a learning community!
- Don't be shy about asking questions.
- Communicate with your classmates and support each other.
- Here are some additional tips: <https://learningcommons.ubc.ca/resource-guides/online-learners/>

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Upon completion of this course you will be able to:

- speak and write German at the intermediate level B1¹, which is generally required to work in Germany;
- understand spoken German in audio documents and videos as well as written German, at the intermediate level B1;
- continue studying German at the level B2, which is generally required to study in Germany.
- identify and debate significant cultural differences;
- enhance your understanding of your own cultural background;
- enhance your ability to manage ambiguity and uncertainty;
- apply a variety of learning strategies to succeed in language learning.

Learning German and gaining an understanding of German-speaking cultures will expose you to modes of thought and expression outside your own language and culture. It will improve your knowledge of your native language and culture and expand your understanding of the interrelation of language, thought, and culture. It will also prepare you for further studies of German or other languages.

PREREQUISITES

German 200, or equivalent proficiency in German: German 210 is intended for students who have successfully completed German 200, or who have an equivalent level of proficiency in German. Students who have some knowledge of German but do not have formal accreditation, are required to take a computerized assessment of their proficiency. Please send an e-mail to Angelika Struch at angelika@mail.ubc.ca for information on how to complete the assessment.

COREQUISITES: None

¹ Common European Framework of Reference for Languages
<https://www.coe.int/en/web/common-european-framework-reference-languages>

COURSE STRUCTURE

This course focuses on the formal acquisition of the German language. It is designed to advance and expand upon basic linguistic skills through integrated and interactive practice in reading, writing, listening and speaking. The Program also promotes intercultural learning and the development of an international awareness.

Instruction in German 210 will be provided through a combination of synchronous and asynchronous approaches to learning. Students are expected to attend regularly scheduled meetings online, at which they will interact with the instructor and other classmates at the same time (synchronous approach). Most synchronous instruction will integrate a combination of lecture, question and answer sessions, whole-class participation, small group activities, partner work and individual work. Learning success will depend on student participation in these synchronous learning activities.

Learning success will also be determined by the quality of work completed independently (asynchronous approach). This includes exercises and tasks completed using the hueber sicher materials, as well as work that is assigned to be submitted directly to the instructor. Learning a foreign language requires sustained engagement with the material to be learned. German 210 emphasizes the responsibility of students for their own learning; therefore, you will be expected to engage in asynchronous learning of German every day.

Your instructor will determine the platform to be used for instructional meetings and will advise you on making yourself available to meet virtually. For most of your other online course interaction, you will be using Canvas, UBC's online learning management platform. It will be used by your instructor to facilitate regular online communication and for such other varied purposes as accessing course material, initiating discussions and undertaking quizzes and exams.

To log in to Canvas and learn more about the role of this online platform for your learning at UBC visit: <https://students.canvas.ubc.ca>

If you have a strong preference to only work with the print edition, that is possible but a bit more complicated. You would not have access to the videos. Everything else is on the hueber website: answer keys for the exercises in the Kursbuch and the Arbeitsbuch, additional online exercises, grammar overview, audio files, transcripts.

TECHNICAL EQUIPMENT

The following technical equipment is required for all students of German 200:

1. A reliable computer
2. A webcam (either built in to your computer or external)
3. Reliable access to the internet
4. A browser that supports the viewing of videos and listening to audio
5. A space suitable for learning and study

Students will need a computer that has video and audio capacity; for instance, the capacity to view and download documents and presentations, including power point presentations. For most activities, students will be permitted to leave their cameras off. The exception are those instances where the student(s) must be seen, in order to meet a pedagogical outcome.

A stable internet connection and an environment free of disturbances and distractions is essential. A headset with microphone is optional.

All questions and problems regarding technical equipment should be directed to the Learning Technology Hub: lt.hub@ubc.ca. If you encounter technical issues while using Canvas, please contact the UBC Information Technology Service Centre for assistance, using their online form. Participation and Preparation (5%)

Active participation in all synchronous learning activities is fundamental to language learning success. Students come prepared for scheduled synchronous learning by completing the work assigned for asynchronous learning.

Exemption: Students may be excused from participation in synchronous learning sessions by providing due cause in a written application to their instructor. Where a student is excused, such additional asynchronous learning activities as the instructor deems appropriate will be assigned, to ensure learning success and to meet the grade allocation requirement.

Instructors will assign a variety of asynchronous learning activities to promote student proficiency in the linguistic skills of reading, writing, listening and speaking and to advance lexical, structural and cultural knowledge. These assignments may include but are not limited to activities such as presentations, blogs, discussion boards, essays, games, learning journals, portfolios and projects. They may also involve such evaluative formats as assessments and quizzes.

The selection, marking parameters and grade allocation for the learning assignments within this category are at the discretion of the instructor.

There will be two Canvas Quizzes evaluating listening comprehension in German. Each constitutes 5% of the final grade and will take place on the scheduled dates of Test 1 and Test 2. The time allotted to the completion of a quiz can range from 5 to 20 minutes, but it will be accessible for a total period of 24 hours to accommodate students residing in different time zones.

Assessment Content and Format

Before both tests and the final exam, students will receive detailed information about content and format.

The content of the tests and final exam is consistent with the instructional content of the course materials. The format of the tests and the final exam will be divided into units that assess the linguistic proficiencies of listening, reading and writing, as well as the formal structures of the language and lexical knowledge. Speaking proficiency is assessed separately.

Listening proficiency in a variety of speech acts will be assessed through authentic audio recordings. Tasks to assess comprehension may include but are not limited to providing a “Ja” or “Nein” response to questions about what was heard, choosing the correct answer from a selection of possible responses, or filling the gaps in sentences or in a table of information.

Comprehension of the grammatical structures of German will be assessed through tasks and activities appropriate to the structure; e.g. word order may be assessed by re-writing scrambled sentences in the correct word order, using the verbs in their correct form and making case changes, where necessary. Units assessing lexical acquisition are always presented within a coherent and meaningful context and involve discrete recognition activities such as ordering, matching or text completion. Assessment forms primarily involve true/false and multiple-choice questions.

Reading comprehension of a variety of textual genres will be assessed through appropriate comprehension tasks. Assessment tasks may include but are not limited to answering questions about a text, completing a table of information about a text, selecting the correct responses to questions about a text, or putting scrambled information into the correct order.

Writing proficiency will be assessed by requiring that students write in German on topics that have been covered in the instructional materials. They may be asked to write a conversation, an e-mail message, a text or a report. In all instances, the writing topic and genre will enable them to express their individual opinions, perspectives and imagination.

The assignments and examinations should demonstrate learner understanding of the course material, through synthesis and application, i.e. the skilled use of written and spoken German. The grading criteria are consistent with the criteria established by the Faculty of Arts see: <http://www.calendar.ubc.ca/vancouver/index.cfm?tree=3,42,96,0>

Assessment Policies

IMPORTANT: In order to successfully complete the requirements for German 200, students must achieve a total grade of at least 50% for the course and a minimum grade of 45% on the final examination. Students, who do not achieve a minimum grade of 45% on the final examination, will receive a failing grade for the course. Rewriting a test or redistributing the grade percentage values as allocated in the Grade Breakdown (p. 5) is not permitted.

In accordance with University regulations, cheating and plagiarism is subject to disciplinary action. Students in the German Language Program must write, correct and/or revise all their assignments independently; that is, with no assistance of any kind from another person. The use of electronic aids and devices is also strictly prohibited; however, students are permitted to consult a German-English dictionary, their textbook and/or a grammar book. See: <http://learningcommons.ubc.ca/citing-sources-is-about-more-than-just-following-the-rules/>

Assignments are to be submitted on the original due date, and tests and exams are to be taken on the day set by either your instructor, the program coordinator or by General Faculties Council. In accordance with UBC policy, students who wish to observe a religious holiday must notify their instructor two weeks in advance of the religious holiday they wish to observe.

If you miss marked coursework for the first time (assignments, assessments, tests, exam) and the course is still in-progress, immediately submit a Student Self-Declaration to your instructor, so that your in-term concession case can be evaluated. If you are not requesting concession for the first time or if scheduled instruction is over, fill out an Arts Academic Advising's online academic concession form immediately, so that an advisor can evaluate your concession case. If you are a student in a different Faculty, please consult your Faculty's webpage on academic concession and then contact your instructor where appropriate.
